ANIMAL HUSBANDRY

A NEW STUDY ABROAD PROGRAM AT PERROTIS COLLEGE

FALL 2019

Courses offered:

ANIMAL WELFARE

MANAGEMENT OF
LIVESTOCK AND PRODUCTION

NUTRITION AND CONTEMPORARY FEEDING
SYSTEMS

Introduction

Since its founding in 1904, the American Farm School has been a pioneer in education in Greece and the Balkans. The school produced the first omega 3 eggs in Greece and was the first Greek dairy farm to produce pasteurized milk.

In that same spirit, Perrotis College, the tertiary division of the American Farm School, continues to strive for excellence, offering a top-notch education to create professionals at the forefront of innovation in the agro-food sector.

Animal Husbandry

For the first time, study abroad students will be able to enroll in courses focused on animal husbandry; gaining a unique European perspective in American Farm School classrooms, labs, and Educational Farm. The courses focus on experiential learning combining theory and practice, while gaining insight into the entire production chain, from primary production to the final product on retail shelves. Current issues and best practices are analyzed, giving students the tools necessary to make appropriate and informed choices as professionals.

PERROTIS COLLEGE STUDENTS GAIN A DEEPER INSIGHT INTO THE FIELD OF ANIMAL HUSBANDRY THAT IS BOTH INNOVATIVE AND HOLISTIC, WHILE UPHOLDING OUR CORE VALUE OF LEARNING BY DOING.

WHO BENEFITS?

The school embraces a holistic approach to the agro-food sector, therefore, students in all fields relevant to this sector will gain theoretical knowledge and hands-on experience necessary to enter the professional arena.

Specifically, Animal Science students will be able to study courses relevant to their major while learning about European, and more specifically, Greek conditions - including legislation, current issues, genetics, procedures, and techniques.

Agricultural business students will learn about production issues such as animal welfare that impact costs. The courses address production and management decisions that are critical to the survival of an agricultural business. Challenges and issues facing the farmer are addressed and possible solutions are covered.

WHAT IS INCLUDED?

Students address a wide range of significant issues related to animal production. Parameters such as reproduction, genetics, and feeding relate directly to production optimization affecting the final product as seen on store shelves. Students gain skills and knowledge throughout the entire production chain.

Students work firsthand with the AFS Holstein cows and poultry, and, together with our management team, learn how to make informed decisions regarding animal health. Student knowledge is enhanced through study visits to sheep and buffalo farms with the goal of getting a holistic grasp of challenges and issues in the field.

Interested students may also conduct research on an existing topic or one of their own choice.
